Birthday Anniversary of Southern Hero Is Occasion of Celebration

Southern Cross Dance Will Be Missed On Lee's Birthday

From now until well up into February there are numerous special days which will influence the motifs for social affairs as well as in many instances, being the incentive for the entertainments. The first of these is the birthday anniversary of that wonderful, classic figure, which stands is the birthday anniversary of that wonderful, classic figure, which stands is the birthday anniversary of that wonderful, classic figure, which stands out in the history of the South and Confederacy, Gew Robert E. Lee.

Monday is the anniversary of Gen O.

Lee's birthday and as usual it will be fittingly celebrated by the Confederate organizations. Many years ago that important anniversary was made the occasion of a wonderful ball given by the Confederate organizations, at which the Southern Cross drill was given by the veterans and some of the prettiest young girls, and later the veterans and many of the prominent matrons loibed in the beautiful old-fashioned Virginis reel, after which the younger generation continued dancing into the early morning. But the last of these brilliant affairs was given some 10 or 12 or possibly more, years ago. As they grew older the veterans began to feel that perhaps it was more fitting to celebrate the anniversary of the great Southern chieffan in a more dignified manner, so the fashion of celebrating the day was changed and instead of the elabrate ball, reminiscent of the South, they arranged a program of addresses and suitable music. That will be the form of the celebration which has been planned for Monday by the veterans, who, like the old Southern days and story, which is the saddest of their going.

No one who has ever had the pleasure of knowing the Confederate veterans with their rare old-fashioned dingling looked forward to with much pleagure. After a few weeks' stay in Atlantic City, Lieut. Hale and his bride will make their home in Boston, where he is copleting a post-graduate course at the Massachusetts School of Techhology.

The Country club will be the scene of a most enjoyable affair on Saturday evening, when one of the largest parties will be that given by Mrs. M. E. Finch, specially complimenting a lovely debutance, Miss Elizabeth Jordan, and her attractive guest, Miss Cornella Head, of Brookline, Mass. Mrs. Finch has chosen a beautiful lavendar and gold color scheme, which will be effectively carried out in spring blossoms. The centerpiace will be of lavender sweetpeas, golden jonquils, with white naroissi and ferns, while a most artistic touch will be added by tapers burning in very handsome crystal and gold candelabra. A lovely feature will be introduction in the delicious bombons, which will be in the form of flowers and fnarshmallow mints, in harmony with the color motif.

The lavender and gold color note will be reflected in the exquisite gown of lavender and gold metal cloth worn by Miss Jordan, the bodice in mayonage effect, being fashioned of lavender and gold brocade, bordered by lavender and gold brocade, bordered by lavender ostrich tips and trimmed with French flowers, with which she will wear a corsage bouquet of orchids, yellow roses and valley illies. Miss Head will wear a French frock of white satin, draped in white georgetic crepe embroidered in silver roses, wired in minaret effect and looped with garlands of silver roses. Her flowers will be roses and valley illies. Covers were laid for six with a colo scheme of pink which was used ef-fectively in the centerpiece of Russell roses in a silvey basket. A delicious five-course menu was enjoyed.
